The first year class is larger than that of last year, though not quite equal to the last class entering under the old rules, the class of three years ago. There is a considerable falling off in the numbers of the present third year class, largely to be explained by the fact it is the last class whose members can remain away from the school a year and still take their degree. The men of this class who have not returned make 32 per cent of the whole class this year, as against 28, 36, 30, 34, and 44, respectively, in the five preceding years. The percentage of men failing to return for their second year is also increased, being 25 per cent, as against 7, 23, 28, 24, and 27 in previous years. It is noteworthy, however, that in this class only 6 per cent of those who passed their examinations have failed to return.

The number of men who withdrew or did not take their examinations last year was 16 per cent in the first year class and 6 per cent in the second year class, as compared with 9 per cent and 3 per cent, respectively, in the preceding year.

The addition of 5 per cent to the required passing-mark has apparently had some effect; but nevertheless the number of men in the school is larger than ever before.

Twenty-nine of the men in the present first year class who hold no degrees are Harvard seniors on leave of absence.

The following thirty-four colleges have conferred their first degrees on members of the entering class, the figures indicating the number of men from each college, where there are more than one: Yale (30), Amherst (8), Bowdoin (7), Brown (7), Princeton (5), Boston College (4), Dartmouth (4), Tulane University of Louisiana (4), Williams (4), Holy Cross (3), Oberlin (3), University of Chicago (3), Earlham (2), Tufts (2), Stanford University (2), University of New Brunswick (2), University of Virginia (2), Colby, College of the City of New York, Cornell, Georgetown, Iowa, Indiana University, Knox, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Miami, Ohio Wesleyan, University of California, University of Georgia, University of Nebraska, University of North Carolina, University of Wooster, Western Reserve. The increased number from Yale is particularly interesting.
